Reading the Numbers

- Deloitte's aggregate global revenue ($70.5B) modestly exceeds Accenture's consolidated revenue ($69.67B), but the two figures are not directly equivalent.
- Accenture's figure is a single audited consolidated total for one listed legal entity.
- Deloitte's figure is the sum of legally separate national member firms' revenues, published once a year with no audited consolidation.
- Fiscal year-ends differ by three months (Accenture: 31 Aug · Deloitte: 31 May), so the two periods overlap but are not identical.

Revenue Growth Trend

Growth Read-Through

- Accenture's FY25 growth (+7.4%) accelerated from a near-flat FY24 (+1.2%), aided by generative-AI-related bookings and acquisitions (goodwill rose from $21.1B to $22.5B).
- Deloitte has posted three straight years of mid-single-digit growth and became, in FY2025, the first professional-services network to cross $70 billion in revenue — then grew a further 5.7% in FY2026 (to $74.5B).

Why a Like-for-Like Ratio Comparison Isn’t Possible

The gap in the previous slide isn’t a data-collection gap — it reflects a structural difference between how the two firms are owned and reported.

ACCENTURE

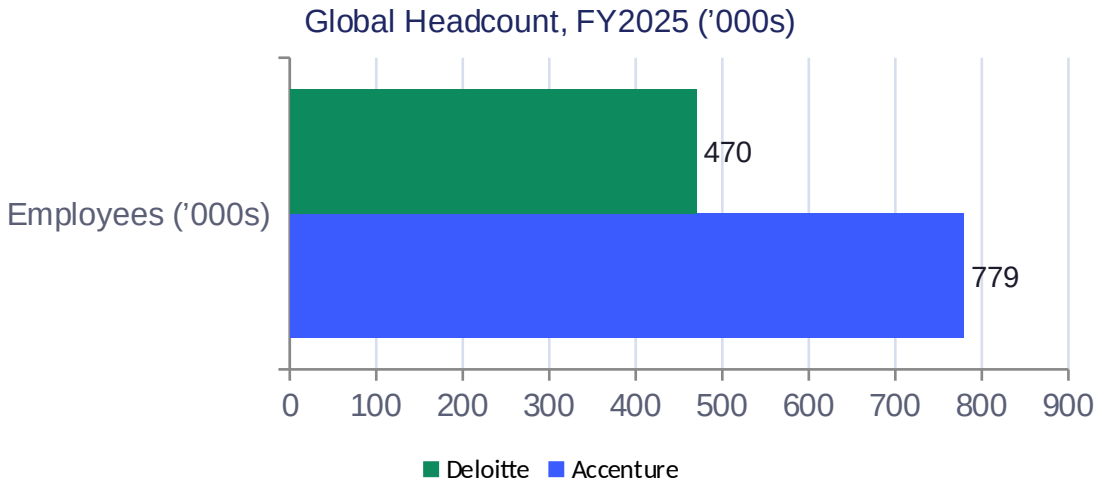

- Single consolidated legal entity, publicly listed on the NYSE.
- Required by SEC rules to file an audited 10-K every year.
- Publishes a full balance sheet, income statement, and cash-flow statement — the raw material every ratio in this deck needs.

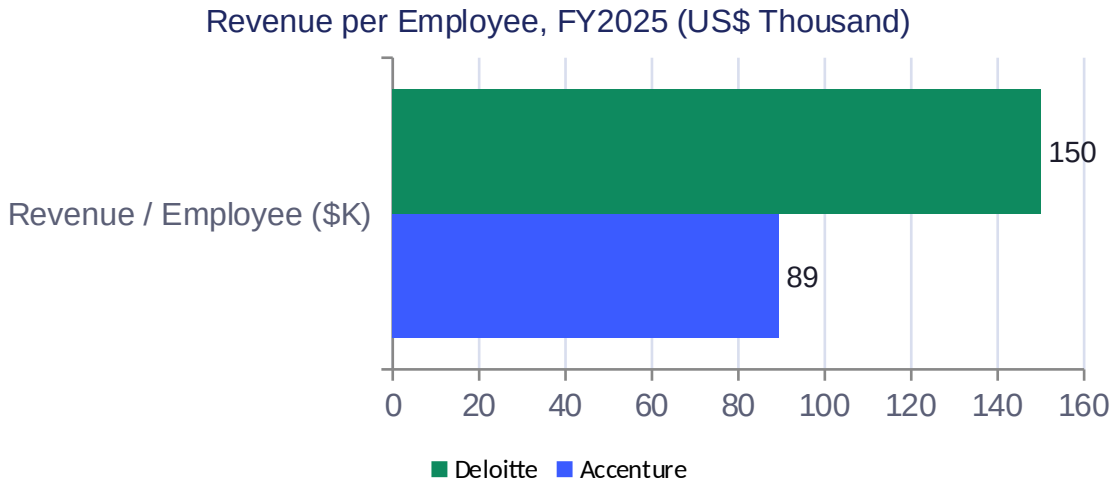

DELOITTE

- A network of legally independent national member-firm partnerships, tied together by DTTL, a UK guarantee company — not a single owned corporation.
- Each member firm keeps its own private financials; there is no requirement to consolidate or publish them.
- Publicly, Deloitte Global discloses only aggregate revenue, growth rate, and headcount — no profit, assets, liabilities, or equity.

Net effect: liquidity, leverage, and profitability ratios can be computed for Accenture only. Cross-company comparison in this deck is limited to publicly disclosed operating metrics — revenue, growth, and headcount.

Workforce Scale & Revenue Productivity

Reading the Productivity Gap

- Deloitte's higher revenue-per-employee figure partly reflects business mix: audit and tax engagements bill at partner-heavy, higher-realization rates than Accenture's technology-delivery-heavy workforce.
- Accenture grew headcount only ~0.6% in FY2025 (774K → 779K) while lifting revenue 7.4% — a sign of productivity gains, likely aided by AI-enabled delivery.
- Deloitte added roughly 30,000 net hires in FY2025 (≈457K → 470K+), continuing to scale its workforce alongside revenue growth.

Global Footprint & Strategic Positioning

ACCENTURE

- Operates in 120+ countries; component of the S&P 500 and S&P 100.
- Core lines: Strategy & Consulting, Technology, Operations, and Song (marketing/experience).
- Competes chiefly with IBM Consulting, Capgemini, Cognizant, TCS, Infosys, and the Big Four consulting arms.
- FY2025 record bookings and continued AI-linked acquisitions (goodwill + $1.4B YoY) underline an AI-led growth strategy.

DELOITTE

- Present in 150+ countries and territories — the largest of the Big Four by both revenue and headcount.
- Core lines: Audit & Assurance, Consulting, Tax & Legal, Financial Advisory, and Risk Advisory.
- Competes chiefly with PwC, EY, and KPMG, alongside Accenture and IBM in the consulting segment.
- Committed US$3 billion through 2030 to GenAI/Agentic AI (including its Zora AI™ platform with NVIDIA).

Revenue Composition Highlights

ACCENTURE

Accenture discloses revenue by geography (Americas, EMEA, Asia Pacific) and by service group (Strategy & Consulting, Technology, Operations, Song). FY2025 growth was broad-based across all three geographic markets, with the Americas contributing the largest share of new bookings.

$81.2B

Record full-year new bookings, FY2025

DELOITTE

Deloitte reports revenue by region and by business (Audit & Assurance, Consulting, Tax & Legal, Financial Advisory, Risk Advisory). In FY2025, Consulting was the largest line at ~$27.9B (≈42% of revenue), and North America was the largest region at ~$32.4B, with the Americas the fastest-growing region (+7.1%).

What Can — and Can't — Be Compared

Metric	Comparable?	Leader	Note
Revenue scale (FY2025)	Yes	Deloitte (narrowly)	$70.5B vs $69.67B — different consolidation basis
Revenue growth rate	Yes	Accenture	+7.4% vs +4.9% YoY
Headcount	Yes	Accenture	~779K vs 470K+
Revenue per employee	Directional only	Deloitte	Reflects business-mix, not efficiency alone
Liquidity ratios	No	Accenture only	Deloitte publishes no balance sheet
Leverage ratios	No	Accenture only	No consolidated liabilities/equity for Deloitte
Profitability / ROE / ROCE	No	Accenture only	Deloitte profit is distributed privately among partners

"No" = not computable from public Deloitte disclosures, not a performance judgment.

Key Findings & Strategic Insights

Scale is close, structure isn’t

Deloitte’s $70.5B network-wide revenue edges out Accenture’s $69.67B consolidated revenue, but one is a single audited company and the other an aggregate of independent partnerships.

2

Accenture is the transparent operator

Full SEC disclosure gives Accenture a verifiable 24.6% ROE, 11.0% net margin, and 1.42x current ratio — metrics no Big Four network publishes for itself.

3

Both are racing on AI, from different starting points

Accenture leans on tuck-in acquisitions (goodwill +$1.4B in FY2025); Deloitte has committed $3B through 2030 and launched its Zora AI™ platform with NVIDIA.

4

Growth momentum favors Accenture in FY2025

+7.4% revenue growth outpaced Deloitte’s +4.9%, reversing a near-flat FY2024 for Accenture (+1.2%).

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Conclusions & Data Notes

Accenture and Deloitte are close in scale (FY2025 revenue of $69.67B and $70.5B respectively) but fundamentally different in structure: Accenture is a single, publicly audited company, while Deloitte is a global network of independent member-firm partnerships. That difference is why this deck can benchmark revenue, growth, and headcount for both firms, but can only report full liquidity, leverage, and profitability ratios for Accenture — Deloitte simply does not publish a consolidated balance sheet or net income figure.

Recommendation — If Benchmarking Further

Use operational KPIs (revenue growth, headcount, bookings, service-line mix) as the fair comparison ground; treat any profitability or balance-sheet comparison as Accenture-only analysis rather than a head-to-head.
